

Six Most Reported Student Health Conditions (Data from SC Annual School Nursing Surveys)

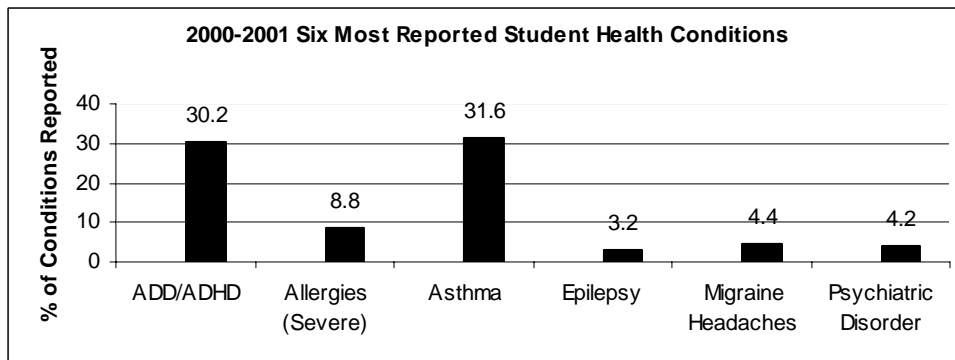

The six most reported health conditions for students has remained consistent over the past five school years with asthma and attention deficit disorder / attention deficit disorder with hyperactivity accounting for approximately 60% of the reported conditions. Severe allergies, epilepsy, migraine headaches and psychiatric disorders round out the top six. The graphs below show the percentage for each of the six most reported health conditions. The percentages refer to a percentage of the total of all health conditions reported for students for the school year indicated.

Survey responses received from 41 of 85 school districts.

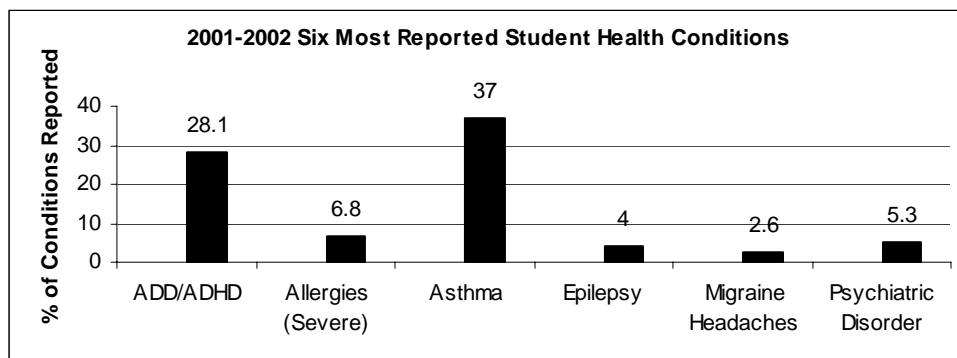

Survey responses received from 45 of 85 school districts.

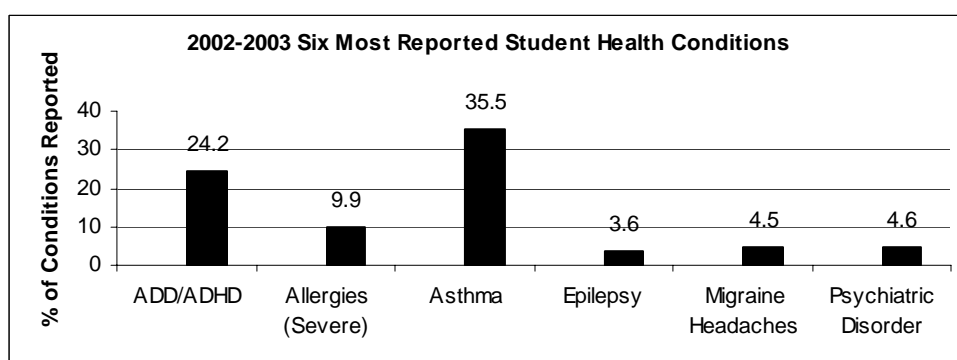

Survey responses received from 51 of 85 school districts.

Six Most Reported Student Health Conditions (cont'd)
(Data from SC Annual School Nursing Surveys)

Survey responses received from 12 of 85 school districts.

Survey responses received from 36 of 85 school districts.